

RAINERI LANGHE BIANCO

'AHR-NAY-SS'
'SHAR-DUN-NAY'

White Wine | Arneis, Chardonnay | Piedmont, Italy | DOC

Arneis is an aromatic white grape variety native to Italy's Piedmont region. It was traditionally used to soften tannins and add complexity to Barolos when blended. Today, it is mostly bottled alone or as part of a blend, like this wine. In the local dialect, its name means 'little rascal', referring to the vine's troublesome growth.

This wine features bright acidity, floral and fruity aromas, and a well-balanced minerality, making it versatile and food-friendly. It pairs well with lighter proteins such as poultry, fish, and seafood, especially dishes with citrus, sage, and thyme. It also complements risottos, salads, fresh fruit, burrata, and mozzarella.

Raineri Winery is a boutique producer located in the heart of Piedmont, celebrated for its commitment to crafting high-quality, terroir-driven wines. Raineri highlights traditional winemaking techniques while incorporating modern methods to boost complexity and elegance. The estate sources grapes from top vineyard sites, guaranteeing wines with structure, depth, and aging potential. Known for minimal intervention, native yeast fermentation, and careful aging in oak, their wines showcase the authenticity and character of the Langhe region.
